

I'm thinking of doing something at a party.

- Someone is in hurt
- People are drunk
- They go into a bathroom
- Looking for first aid
- Serious situation

Proposal: There is a party where for the first 30 seconds everyone is having a good time, until some girl gets injured really badly and starts bleeding everywhere. The host then scrambles to find a first aid kit, and finds a few bandages and make shift gaws to stop the bleeding until an ambulance arrives.

Script:

0:00-0:30 - Crowd noise/party noise

0:30-0:33 - glass breaking, "ooooooh", crowd noise stays the same

0:33-0:45 - dialogue asking if girl is okay, people freaking out, differing reactions to the situation

0:45-0:50 - people asking for the host of the party "Johnny", "Can someone get Johnny",
"Where's Johnny"

0:50-1:00 - Johnny's entrance, "What? What's the problem... Oh $#!±."

1:00-1:10 - frantic dialogue continues

1:10-1:30 - Johnny and a friend start to frantically look for a first aid kit

1:30-1:45 - A phone call from someone downstairs to Johnny "Dude did you find a first-aid kit, she's bleeding like crazy"

1:45-2:00 - Johnny finds first aid kit and gaws, someone mentions that they already called 911

2:00-2:15 - Johnny talks to the girl, says she's going to be okay and wraps her arm in bandages.

2:15-2:40 - Johnny and other friends helping the girl continue to help and apply pressure, someone mentions that flower works, they get pancake mix

2:40-3:00 first responders show up, say the girl is gonna be okay and tells the crew helping her out "Good work"
